Euro 6 Emissions Standards

Every new model on sale in the UK has to undergo the New European Driving Cycle (NEDC) procedure before it can be sold in showrooms. This test measures emissions of each engine and gearbox combination a new car is sold with under laboratory conditions on a rolling road.

Euro 6 is the sixth incarnation of the European Union directive to reduce harmful pollutants from vehicle exhausts. The Euro 6 standard was introduced in September 2015, and all mass-produced cars sold from this date need to meet these emissions requirements. The aim of Euro 6 is to reduce levels of harmful car and van exhaust emissions, both in petrol and diesel cars.

This includes nitrogen oxide (NO_x), carbon monoxide (CO), hydrocarbons (THC and NMHC) and particulate matter (PM), which is basically soot from diesel cars. The knock-on effect of reducing these pollutants can also mean improved fuel economy and lower CO₂ emissions.

EC Whole Vehicle M1 Type Approval

Driver and passenger safety is our number one priority. Our vehicles are tested to EC Whole Vehicle Type Approval (ECWV-TA). Once we have designed a vehicle, the parts are fitted to a body shell and taken to a testing facility. The seat anchorage points we fit are pull tested to simulate the forces they'd be subjected to in an accident. The wheelchair fixings have been subjected to a dynamic sled test and all testing is overseen by Type Approval Engineers from the Vehicle Certification Agency.

ECWVTA consists of a series of tests carried out on a prototype vehicle and on the production process used to manufacture the vehicle. If the vehicle and production process pass these stringent safety and environmental tests, then the vehicle receives EC Whole Vehicle Type Approval. Each subsequent vehicle manufactured in the same way is issued with an EC Certificate of Conformity (ECCoC) which allows the vehicle to be registered in any Member State of the EU.
